The Little Lion Who Was Afraid to Roar

In a bright green jungle, there lived a young lion named Leo. Unlike the other lions, Leo was afraid to roar.

Whenever he tried, only a tiny squeak came out.

“Squeeeak!”

The monkeys laughed.
The parrots copied him.
Even the sleepy crocodile opened one eye and chuckled.

Leo felt sad. “I’ll never be a real lion,” he sighed.

One afternoon, dark clouds covered the jungle. A huge storm began shaking the trees. Baby animals became frightened and lost their way.

Leo saw a tiny rabbit trapped near the river.

He was scared too… but he knew he had to help.

Leo jumped over rocks, pulled the rabbit to safety, and guided the other animals beneath a giant tree.

“You saved us!” the animals cheered.

“But… I still can’t roar,” Leo whispered.

Just then, the rabbit smiled. “A real lion isn’t the loudest one. A real lion is the bravest one.”

Leo’s heart filled with courage.

He took a deep breath and let out a mighty—

“ROOOAAAR!”

The whole jungle echoed with his roar.

From that day on, no one laughed at little Leo again. And whenever storms came, the animals knew their brave friend would always protect them.

The End.
